

From Kingston to the Hurley Flats...
CATSKILL MOUNTAIN RAILROAD

The Ulster & Delaware Railroad started construction in 1866 from the Hudson River at Kingston Point. By 1900, the line was complete through to Oneonta, providing a vital link for freight and passengers through the Catskills. Acquired by the New York Central Railroad in 1932, the last passenger train ran in 1954. In later years, Penn Central offered freight service, but after decades of decline, the last freight train rode on the old U&D tracks in 1976. Ulster County purchased the railroad in 1979 to preserve the corridor for future rail use. In 1982, the Catskill Mountain Railroad was chartered to run tourist passenger trains as well as freight service. The train you're riding today is just one part of a long-term plan to re-open the length of the railroad from Kingston to Phoenicia and beyond. Enjoy a fun train ride in our rebuilt caboose or enjoy the fresh air of our open flatcar.

Our volunteers work year round to open up more tracks and extend your ride into the Catskills each year. Your support helps make it all possible!
